Discovery Gateway Welcomes Children's Musician Steve Weeks

SALT LAKE CITY—Discovery Gateway children's museum welcomes children's musician and one-man-band Steve Weeks on Friday, July 11 at 12pm. The one-hour performance will be free with museum admission. Weeks, who performs all of the instruments and vocals on his creations, has released three children's albums, Alphabet Songs Vols. I-III, and he has received numerous accolades, including: 2007 USA Songwriting Competition Winner (Children's Music Category), 2005 Parents' Choice Winner, National Parenting Publications Award (NAPPA) Honors Winner, 2005 International Songwriting Competition Finalist, and 2005 USA Songwriting Competition Finalist. Week's music can consistently be heard on XM Kids, with his songs "Kiki Kangaroo" and "Someday" reaching the #1 position on the channel's top ten list.

"Discovery Gateway is excited to welcome Steve Weeks to the museum. His music is whimsical and melodic, with clever lyrics that appeal to parents and kids alike," said Tammy Spicer, the museum's manager of programming, "Discovery Gateway is committed to offering parents and children interactive and entertaining activities that will bring them closer together."

Seating for the performance will be on a first-come, first-served basis. ### About Discovery Gateway...

Discovery Gateway, formerly The Children's Museum of Utah, located at 444 West 100 South is a contemporary, interactive discovery center that inspires children of all ages to imagine, explore, and connect with their world. Bright and engaging hands-on exhibits, programs, and workshops welcome the whole family to create, learn, and play together. In addition to hands-on learning and play, Discovery Gateway also boasts a one-of-a-kind partnership with Junior Achievement. It is the mission of Discovery Gateway to not only open up a world of possibilities, but to inspire children and their adults to consider endless career possibilities as they share the moment of discovery.
